

Testing of newly programmed components is an integral part of software development. Data Generator for Microsoft SQL Server is a tool for simple populating database tables with testing data which allows efficient database component testing for programmers, administrators and other database developers. Generated data can be structured using the parameters which are set in a simple user interface. Generated data correspond with database schema and constraints defined on columns. In following text we are going to describe the architecture and implementation details together with the necessary theoretical knowledge.